1	B	2	E	3	C	4	B	5	A	6	E	7	D	8	C	9	E	10	C

Explanations

1. Choose the sentence that is grammatically or structurally incorrect.
✓ B) You won't learn to speak Turkish properly unless you don't come here and stay with us for a couple of months.
Unless already means if not, so it is followed by a positive verb. Adding don't makes a double negative. Correct version: You won't learn to speak Turkish properly unless you come here and stay with us for a couple of months.

2. Choose the sentence that is grammatically or structurally incorrect.
✓ E) I wish I didn't break it. But since I have, I will pay for it.
To express regret about a past action, use wish + past perfect: I wish I hadn't broken it. The next sentence, since I have, shows the breaking has already happened, so the past simple didn't break is wrong. Correct version: I wish I hadn't broken it. But since I have, I will pay for it.

3. Choose the sentence that is grammatically or structurally incorrect.
✓ C) He couldn't have arrived before the others, could he have?
A question tag repeats only the first auxiliary or modal verb, followed by the pronoun. With couldn't have arrived, the tag is could he?, not could he have? Correct version: He couldn't have arrived before the others, could he?

4. Choose the sentence that is grammatically or structurally incorrect.
✓ B) "I feel very sorry for you!" "Oh, you do, don't you?"
When we repeat someone's words to show surprise, anger or sarcasm, we use an echo tag with the same polarity: positive + positive, negative + negative. Compare Oh, you would, would you? and Oh, you won't, won't you? So the reply should be Oh, you do, do you?, not don't you?

5. Choose the sentence that is grammatically or structurally incorrect.
✓ A) "Have you got the tickets?" "Yes, I've got."
In a short answer to a have got question, we use only the auxiliary: Yes, I have. Got cannot end the sentence without an object. Correct versions: Yes, I have. or Yes, I've got them.

6. Choose the sentence that is grammatically or structurally incorrect.
✓ E) Isn't there anyone else time you can waste instead of mine?
To show possession after anyone else, the possessive 's goes on else: anyone else's time, like someone else's in another option. Anyone else time is missing the possessive. Correct version: Isn't there anyone else's time you can waste instead of mine?

7. Choose the sentence that is grammatically or structurally incorrect.
✓ D) I'm looking forward to see you tomorrow.
In look forward to, to is a preposition, not part of an infinitive. It must be followed by a noun or an -ing form: I'm looking forward to seeing you tomorrow. Object to being pushed in another option follows the same rule.

8. Choose the sentence that is grammatically or structurally incorrect.
✓ C) I surprised to hear such words from you.
Surprised is an adjective here, so it needs the verb be: I am surprised to hear such words from you. Without am, the sentence has no main verb.

9. Choose the sentence that is grammatically or structurally incorrect.
✓ E) It's a good thing that it has stopped to rain.
Stop + -ing means an activity ends: it has stopped raining. Stop + to-infinitive means stopping one thing in order to do something else, e.g. He stopped to buy a paper. That meaning makes no sense with rain. Correct version: It's a good thing that it has stopped raining.

10. Choose the sentence that is grammatically or structurally incorrect.
✓ C) I can't imagine why are you so angry with me.
In an indirect question after verbs like imagine, know or wonder, we use normal statement word order (subject + verb), not question order. Correct version: I can't imagine why you are so angry with me. Not why are you.
